The second page of text is also written in the same cursive script. It begins with a large initial character that looks like a stylized 'A' or 'K'. The text is organized into several lines, with some characters circled or marked with dots, possibly indicating specific points of interest or a key.

The first page of text on the right side is written in the same cursive script. It begins with a large initial character that looks like a stylized 'P' or 'B'. The text is arranged in a single column on the left side of the page.

The second page of text on the right side is written in the same cursive script. It begins with a large initial character that looks like a stylized 'A' or 'K'. The text is organized into several lines, with some characters circled or marked with dots.
