Child, Josiah.

A Treatise concerning the East-India trade. I. That the East-India trade is the most national of all foreign trades. II. That the clamors, aspersions and objections made against the present East-India Company, are sinister, selfish, or groundless. III. That since the discovery of the East-Indies, the dominion of the sea depends much upon the wane or increase of that trade, and consequently the security of the liberty, property, and protestant religion of this Kingdom. IV. That the trade of the East-Indies cannot be carried on to national advantage, more profitable and necessary to the Kingdom of England, than to any other Kingdom or national in Europe. On our monetary system, and so forth. With an explanation of the causes by which the pressures in the money market are produced and a plan for their remedy, which can be carried into immediate effect, without any derangement, and with the approbation of the banks, both private and public, by which the currency is issued. London, M DCCC XXXIX. (1839) (Photocopy) [122-J-29]

Joplin, [Thomas.]

Outlines of a system of political economy; written with a view to prove to government and the country, that the cause of the present agricultural distress is entirely artificial; and to suggest a plan for the management of the currency, by which it may be remedied now, and any recurrence of similar evils be prevented in future: together with the fourth edition of an essay on the principles of banking. Tom. 1-2. London, 1823. (Photocopy) [101-J-13]
